The Sentinel acknowledges the receipt of some sample oranges from the farm of Major O. P. Roarks, of Fruitland Park, Florida. Major Roarks was formerly a resident of this city and moved to Florida some eight years ago on account of ill health. His friends will be glad to know that he has been entirely restored to good health.

Plymouth Church Organ Recital.

The organ recital of Professor Clark was attended by a very appreciative audience yesterday afternoon. The concert opened with the prelude in G minor, by J. Sebastian Bach, the father of modern music, and it might be added of organ music as such especially. It is a forceful composition, pervaded with sonful expression, and was played in the style demanded. The cantata pastoral which followed was composed by Guillaume, who Professor Clark said was the leading French organist of to-day.

The national anthem of the English, "God Save the Queen," with variations by Beethoven, was played with fine effect. The author of this celebrated piece is unknown. Some have supposed it to be Haydn, on account of its resemblance to "God Save the Queen," the Austrian national air, composed by him; others have thought it to be composed by Handel, who resided in England at the time it appeared; some claim it for Boieldieu, the author of "The Maid of Orleans," and evidence is pretended to be adduced to that effect.

A strong quartet by Meyer, the author of the well known hymn, at that time, delighted the audience very much. A funeral march, by Chopin, was a somber and pathetic number.

The programme was varied by the introduction of two songs from Mrs. Thompson--an "Ave Marie," lately issued from Milan, Italy, and that old English melody, "Thou Art Gone from My Gaze." Both were sweetly sung.

Professor Clark, by request, explained how it was that classical music was always enjoyed at first hearing. He said it was composed not of the melody and simple accompaniment only, but the ground work was in principle of four parts, and each part had to be observed by close attention, and a true understanding and appreciation came only by experience. The Professor illustrated by playing the "Hunter's Chorus," from "Die Fieschitz," and afterward, for further simple illustration of how two themes can be rendered at once, he played "Yankee Doodle" with one hand and "Old Hundred" with the other.

The concert closed with the overture to the "Gaiety of Baghdad," that old-time favorite, not now often heard.

These recitals are of great value on account of educational influence, and should be attended and encouraged by all interested in music. Mr. McCulloch announced, in conclusion, that beginning next Saturday night a series of popular organ concerts would be given.

Fletcher, medical diseases, 11 a. m., Wednesday; Dr. J. L. Thompson, diseases of eye and ear, 1 p. m., Monday; Dr. C. E. Wright, diseases of eye and ear, 11 a. m., Friday; Dr. Joseph W. Marrow, surgical diseases, 4:30 p. m., Thursday; Dr. Franklin W. Hays (Superintendent), diseases of the skin, 9:30 a. m., Wednesday. Besides the above named gentlemen a number of appointments are to be made from other physicians in the city, who will act as assistants. This will make the most complete dispensary service that has ever been organized in the city and will be another great help to our well-organized charities.

Death of Mrs. Dalzell.

The remains of Mrs. Samuel Dalzell reached the city from Atlanta, Ga., yesterday, and were taken in charge by Kregelo. The funeral will take place this afternoon from the residence of Mr. J. C. Yohn. Mr. and Mrs. Dalzell left the city in November to spend the winter with their daughter in Georgia, when Mrs. Dalzell died suddenly on Thursday last. The deceased was a daughter of Hiram Brown, one of the pioneers of this city and an eminent lawyer, and she was the sister of Mrs. J. C. Yohn of this city. Mrs. Mary E. Jones, of Washington, and Mrs. Matilda McKay, of Lebanon, O., and of Governor Porter's first wife. Nearly her whole life was spent in Indianapolis, except during long periods of travel in this country, Europe and Africa. The deceased was fifty-four years of age.

PARDONED BY THE GOVERNOR.

The Story Connected With the Life Sentence of Peter Crawford.

Peter Crawford, convicted of murder in the Clarke Circuit Court, in 1872, and sentenced to imprisonment for life, has been pardoned by the Governor. Soon after Governor Porter entered upon his official term and while making a visit to the Southern Prison, he asked the Warden to show him some of the convicts who had no friends to plead their cause or with whose crime there were connected mitigating circumstances. The Governor was escorted to the prison hospital where Crawford was lying in bed with a bagged throat, the result of an attempt to commit suicide. The Governor attempted to enter into conversation with the prisoner, but found him morose and disposed to look upon the world as being his enemy. A second visit found Crawford in a better mood, and his history and the story of his crime were soon learned.

It seems that he was but nineteen years of age when he left his Kentucky home and secured work on a railroad section in Clarke County. He was young and active and performed his work well. By his side worked a cripple with whom Crawford sympathized, and it was his custom to help his cripple friend bring up his work, when Crawford's task had been completed. The section boss, who appeared to have been a surly, cross-grained fellow, objected to Crawford lending a helping hand to the cripple, and ill-feeling sprang up between the two during their arguments on the subject. Crawford threatened to leave the section, and secure work on another part of the line, but the section boss threatened to interfere and use his influence against his proposed change. A quarrel resulted, and Crawford killed the section boss with his pocketknife. On the trial he had no money to employ counsel, and the court appointed a lawyer to defend him. The trial resulted in conviction, and a life sentence was passed.

When these facts became known to the Governor, he had Crawford transferred to the Northern Prison, where he has been since June, 1881. The prisoner appears to be suffering from deep melancholy, and the Warden expressed the belief that he would become permanently deranged if he was kept in the prison. The Warden of the two prisons and the Directors of the Northern Prison joined in a petition to the Governor for the pardon in the result. The interest which the Governor feels in the prisoner is evidenced by the fact that he has sent him money out of his private purse that he may not be penniless when he leaves the prison.
